Abstract

This report examines the emerging trends in transportation policies in Britain and the United States. In Britain, the PFI (Private Finance Initiative) has been widely used in road projects to finance infrastructure. On the other hand, in the U.S., the MAP-21 (Moving Ahead for Progress in the 21st Century) Act is a significant policy in the field of transportation. The report highlights the differences and similarities in these policies and their impacts on the transportation sector.
